[MarkMagic Add-On] FormWeaver

Combine Elements of Your Formats, Labels, and Forms.

FormWeaver enables printing of documents that combine multiple formats. FormWeaver Documents come in many varieties, including the merging of two or more formats on one page. An example of merged formats would be a bill of lading form with a shipping label in the lower left hand corner. FormWeaver Documents can also consist of multiple formats per input record. A printed invoice that contains a duplexed back page with special instructions, is an example of this feature.

Merge Formats

Documents made with FormWeaver can consist of multiple formats per input record. Any printed invoice that contains a duplexed back page with special instructions, is an example of this feature.

Collate with Ease

Design packing lists, bar-code carrier labels, and return labels, then use FormWeaver to merge them onto one sheet. You can even add fine print or instructions on side 2 of the document.

No Coding Required

Using FormWeaver for printing complex labels or forms means you can concentrate on designing documents that fit your requirements, without worrying about coding for these special forms.

Benefits

Certain industries, particularly those that ship directly to the consumer, require that the shipping document contains both a pick ticket, and a FedEx Ground or UPS carrier label. You no longer need to program for complex documents that contain, for example, a packing list with header information, detail information, and shipping information, as well as an integrated bar code shipping or return label.

Design the packing list, then design a standard shipping label, and use FormWeaver to merge the different formats into one document at print time.

No Time to Program Complex Documents? No Problem.

MarkMagic was designed from the beginning to adapt new barcode symbologies and printer technologies to business requirements. Using FormWeaver for printing complex labels or forms means you can concentrate on designing documents that fit your business requirements, without worrying about programming for these forms.
